

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a web site system including a center site and service sites accessible through the center site, a member information database is managed in the center site and stores member information of the service sites. The member information database stores the member information based on information concerning a member that is obtained at the center site or the service sites. And the center site sends the member information stored in the member information database to the service sites.

[illegible]